A BLOODY RECORD.

Boone Logan Gives a Calendar of the Killings in Rowan County--The Investigation.

The investigation of Rowan County affairs was resumed at Frankfort Tuesday. Boone Logan was the first witness. Following is a summary of his testimony as published in the Louisville Commercial: "A few men were killed there during the war. In 1872 a man by the name of Blair was killed by John Martin, and the latter acquitted. In 1879 Zach Hiatt was killed, and no arrests were made. In 1882 the Cornet boys killed Ty Jones, and were acquitted. In 1881 Joe McDermott was killed, and his murderer was sent to the penitentiary. In 1883 a man by the name of Johnson was killed; no arrests. In 1879 a man named Hammons was killed; no trial, cleared on examination. In 1884 Sol Bradley was killed; no trial. Martin and Tolliver were indicted for killing him, but they were killed in turn before the trial. December 2, 1886, Floyd Tolliver was killed. On December 10, 1885, Joe Martin was taken from the Winchester jail on a forged order and murdered on the train; no indictments. Hughes was killed in 1886, and three persons sent to the penitentiary. Baumgartner, Deputy Sheriff, was waylaid and shot on March 17, 1885, no arrests; but supposed to have been Craig Tolliver. Ben Rayburn was killed June 28, 1888, and nobody indicted. Mace Keeton was killed in 1887, but nobody was indicted and no investigation. J. N. Wicher and one of the Tollivers were fooling with a pistol, and Wicher was shot in the head and killed; no trial. In 1886, July 2, William Logan was killed. On June 7, 1887, William and Jack Logan were killed by Craig, Bud and Jay Tolliver and Bud Maddern; no trial or investigation. In June, 1887, Boone Logan and his posse put a quietus on several of the Tollivers. There have been twenty murders since 1884 and but one conviction. Every one of the grand juries had a Tolliver on them.

"Logan said he never saw a conviction where Judge A. E. Cole presided and Taylor Young defended, and he never saw an acquittal when Young prosecuted. John Keeton confessed that Allie and Taylor Young had offered him a bar room rent free for a year, several cases of beer and $100 in money to kill Howard Logan. Keeton swore Judge Cole off the bench because he did not think he could get justice, and Cole replied in the presence of the jury that 'justice was what he did not want, and further that he had repeatedly sworn to lies in that court.'"

Judge Cole has Judge Alvin Duvall, Wm. Lindsay, Messrs. Hendricks and Sudduth, of Flemingsburg, and Col. Wadsworth, of Maysville, as his counsel.

"LENA DESPARD."

A Great Play--A Great Star--A Great Company.

Mr. Peck, the critic of the Nashville Daily American, is considered one of the most able and experienced writers on theatrical matters in the South. He says this of Miss Lewis:

"Miss Lillian Lewis entirely captured a fine audience at the Masonic last night in her new play. 'Lena Despard' proved both as a play and in its execution a performance of unusual interest. The audience sat quietly through the first act, and at the end of the second forced the curtain up with hearty approbation and followed this by a call for Miss Lewis before the curtain. At the end of the third act there was a similar expression of approval, and the performance was marked throughout with alternate applause and silent and close attention. Miss Lewis has undertaken a very interesting role in Lena Despard, and the care with which she acquitted herself of its lines and action manifests an intelligent conception of the character and a peculiar congeniality between the role and her own ability as an actress. She has to take up and portray the woman of the world, who is still, at the beginning of the play, involved in adventurous undertakings. She schemes to a worthy end, even here, and by degrees the best there is in her nature grows dominant and in the end predominant and overpowering. Miss Lewis is an actress of intelligence, an easy grace of bearing, and a self control that permits her to make a most effective scene of the closing period of the story when she succumbs to the denunciation of her new husband and the crushing disappointments of her position, and dies by poison. The impression she made upon an unusually discriminating audience was of a flattering kind, and it establishes this charming young actress firmly in favor here."

Miss Lewis opens her engagement in this city in the above play to-morrow night. The sale of seats is now progressing at Taylor's.

The North Middletown correspondent of the Paris Kentuckian says: "There will be an art reception at the college next Saturday afternoon between the hours of one and four. The public need be assured of nothing more than that Mrs. Clarke has done her whole duty, both to her pupils and to the reputation of the college. Come, be convinced and see some of the finest work that has ever been done in this community."

Death of Granville Clement.

Granville Clement, who was sent to the asylum at Lexington several weeks ago, died at that place yesterday. His decline was rapid from the time he was taken ill. He was a single man, of middle age.

The remains will be brought here on the evening train, and buried to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of James Hise, of the Fifth ward. The funeral will be in charge of the Knights of Pythias, of which order the deceased was a member.
